Medium Plenty is a California-based interior design and architecture firm founded in 2010, with offices in Oakland and Sonoma. They embrace the privilege of finding inspiration from within each individual client to help them express their unique vision. With their repertoire of services integrated within one company, Medium Plenty's work is notably holistic, cohesive, and refined.

Medium Plenty is about the connection of thoughtful people with compelling ideas, of serious talent with cheeky laughter, and of soothing interiors with sophisticated exteriors.

ABOVE: The rear of this 90-year old home in South Pasadena, California, shows the bedroom extension, clad with angled cedar, alongside the open kitchen and dining area that flows to the back deck of the house with an architectural outdoor trellis. The back garden is a shared space used by the whole family, including the owner's mother.

AT RIGHT: The existing garage was renovated into an ADU for the owner's mother to live in, as seen from the kitchen of the main house, and is located in the shared, communal back garden.
